

So over the last four months or so, I have tried to process what occurred in the middle of August in the Bernsdorff family household, as well as the preceding 8 ½ years. Theories emerged, possible psychological explanations, etc. I tried to view things from what might have been Jennifer's perspective, though she never fully shared with me. I now believe that we were two individuals, both with sociopathic tendencies, with one having an epiphany of conscience, but eventually succumbing to his original nature. Jenn, I fear, whether consciously or not, remains a sociopath, and considering the genetic odds, when coupled with the trauma/separation/ etc. that they have and will experience in this life, it is in the best interest of society and follows natural law that the aberrations, Jennifer, the progeny, and myself included, be eliminated. Andrea as well, as an unethical and salacious human being should be removed from the larger society. The children are beautiful, and were lovely, peaceful creatures, but have now been conditioned/traumatized into future time bombs. Though this act may be viewed as depraved and evil, it does, in fact, leave the world a better place.

I did, in fact, love Jennifer a great deal. And she loved me, in as much as she was capable of it. The most difficult task in all of this was taking the lives of the children. There was purity, and genuine affection...but the damage was already apparent, and I knew would only get worse.

I honestly did my very best to try and scramble – giving the kids a fair shot, while Jenn "collected herself", and eventually returned and participated in a mutually equal, loving relationship but I eventually realized this would not occur...
